Citizens Discuss Mr. Wakefield's Saloon Ordinance—Most Members Favor It.

DEATH OF MRS. ANDERSON

To Celebrate Twenty-fifth Anniversary—To Erect Flag Over School.

Manchester Bureau, Times-Dispatch. In speaking of the ordinance, which was put before the City Council Friday night, several citizens of Manchester said that in their opinion the effect of this ordinance, if passed, would be rather to limit the liquor dealers of the city. They said that already the liquor license was heavy, and to impose such a heavy burden, as is proposed on them, would meet with such dire results as to almost put them out of the business.

On the other hand, they stated themselves as believing that the effect of the ordinance would be of undoubted benefit to the youth of the city, to the habitually loafers around bar-rooms and to those whose custom it is to carouse in saloons late at night. Those who would express themselves on the matter would be fairer to the saloon-keepers by making the closing hours 11 o'clock instead of 10 o'clock up to Saturday night, and on that night at 12 o'clock.

The matter would seem to rest finally between those who side with the interests of the liquor dealers and those who take side with the morals of the city as opposed to the glare and glitter and temptation, offered by the bar-rooms. The ordinance is yet to go before Ordinance Committee.

Truax, who left home on October 21st, on a freight train for Richmond, looking for employment. He is described as a young man of twenty-nine years, five feet seven inches in height, smooth face and fair complexion. He wore a black suit and a black hat.

Any information will be gladly received at police headquarters.

He was about twenty-three years old, five feet four inches in height, weighed 130 pounds, had dark brown hair, and wore dark mixed coat and pants and black diagonal vest. He had a heart, dagger and letter 'S' tattooed on his right arm. The photograph may be seen at detective headquarters, Sixth and Marshall Streets.
